THREE SUSPECTS NABBED AFTER SHOPLIFTING ORGY IN NILES LAST SATURDAY

Woman, Two Men Seized Here; Held Pending Investigation

Niles merchants, harried by shoplifters during recent months, feel that they can relax their vigilance a little following the arrest Saturday of two men and a woman, alleged to have been on an orgy of shoplifting here.

Those being held are Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson, of Oakland, and Joe Ross, who stated that he was a hitch-hiker from Michigan. Ross and Mrs. Thompson were seized in Jack Alberg's hardware store by Motor Officer Duffy Lewis and Constable Tom Silva, who had been summoned by Milton Fournier, one of the victimized shopkeepers. Thompson, discovered waiting with his automobile on a side street, was also held. Quantities of the stolen goods were found in the machine.

According to merchants, the trio began their operations at the American garage, where they took two wrenches. They went next to the Sprouse Reitz 5, 10 and 15 cent store, where they are alleged to have seized a number of pairs of socks. Mrs. Milton Fournier, suspecting the couple, hurried to H. L. Scott's establishment to warn him. Scott immediately phoned to various merchants to beware.

The shoplifter suspects next visited Creed Dominici, at his machine shop, where they are said to have taken a valuable micrometer. Mrs. Martinelli, at her general store was next victim, she declares. The pair took several pairs of stockings, fountain pens and neckties. After leaving Martinelli's, Ross is said to have nonchalantly donned one of the Martinelli neckties, while trying to barter wrenches for gasoline at the Rose garage. The duo next made their way to Alberg's, where the officers caught up with them.

Accused, the woman giving her name as Mrs. Thompso, denied her guilt, at the same time dropping stolen articles from her clothes, spectators said.

The trio's automobile was placed in storage at Rose's garage and they were taken to the county jail, pending examination.

Miss Cecile Enos, Niles Grammar school first grade teacher, is back with her classes this week. Miss Enos has recovered from a recent operation for appendicitis.

Miss Particia Duffy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Duffy, was recently pledged to the Stanford chapter of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority.

ORGANIZATION OF BUSINESSMEN SEEN TO COMBAT THIEVES

H. Scott Suggests Entire Township Be Included In Warning System

Following a series of losses by local merchants through the activities of shoplifters, H. L. Scott, Chamber of Commerce member, Monday suggested that a plan be worked out whereby township merchants could notify each other and the authorities at once in the event of future thefts.

Declaring that a loss of hundreds of dollars is suffered each year through pilfering by the light-fingered gentry, Scott suggested that key merchants be selected in each town, who would spread the word throughout the business section whenever it became known that shoplift suspects were in town. He urged that the telephone numbers of such key men, as well as those of the township authorities, be incorporated into a list for distribution to all businessmen.

In the same line, but designed to meet more serious regional disruption or disturbances, the American Legion Post No. 195, has been working out a plan whereby all doctors, ambulances, nurses, police and committees appointed for the purpose, could be instantly mobilized. Points of command throughout the district would be laid out and each unit drilled in its function. The plan was explained by Roland Bendel, post member. He stated that it was conceived to cope with earthquake disasters, flood, social uprisings, and all nature of community calamities.

SISTER OF J. GOMES PASSES SATURDAY AT SAN JOSE

Word of the death in San Jose of Mrs. Mary G. Pierce, sister of Joseph Gomes, prominent local man, Alfred Gomes and Mrs. Mamie Destrella, was received in Niles Saturday. Mrs. Pierce, a native of Centerville, was raised in this district. She was widely acquainted here. Another sister, Mrs. Anthony Freitas, resides at Alvarado.

In addition to her sisters and brothers, Mrs. Pierce is survived by her husband, William S. Pierce; a son, Wilbert Pierce, and a daughter, Mrs. John Barbe, all of San Jose. She was fifty-six years of age.

Funeral services were Monday morning from the Rancadore and Alameda funeral parlors in San Jose. A requiem high mass followed at the St. Joseph's cathedral. Interment was in the Calvary cemetery.

PIONEER WOMAN TAKEN BY DEATH SUNDAY MORNING

Mrs. H. E. Mosher Dies After 67 Years As State Resident

One of Alameda county's longest-married couples was separated by death Sunday when Mrs. Sarah Jane Mosher, 88, wife of Hugh E. Mosher, succumed after a three months' period of ill health. The Moshers would have celebrated their sixty-ninth wedding anniversary in February.

Mrs. Mosher, always an energetic woman, was taken ill last fall. Since that time she had been confined to her home for the most part, spending a short time at a nearby hospital for treatment. She passed away quietly in her sleep Sunday morning at about 7 o'clock.

She is survived by her husbad, Hugh Mosher; her daughter, Mrs. H. R. Hunt, and a son, Harry Mosher, prominent Oakland man. Another daughter, Maude Mosher, died many years ago. The Moshers' first child died at the age of but two years, in 1867.

Mrs. Mosher was a native of St. John's New Brunswick. She was married to Mosher, also a native of St. Johns, in 1866. They moved immediately to Boston and lived there for a year during which time their first child was born.

Lured by the opening of California, the Moshers broke up their Boston home in 1867 and came to this state by way of the Isthmus of Panama. They stopped for a few days in San Francisco, then came to Hayward on the advice of a physician for the health of their infant son.

Following the death of their first child during a year's stay in Hayward, the Moshers moved to Livermore, where Mrs. Hunt was born. Shortly after they moved again, this time to St. Paul, Minnesota, where they bought property, only to relinquish it after a few months and return to California. They settled in Centerville, and shortly after the birth of their son, Harry, came to Niles, where they have made their home since.

An active church member, Mrs. Mosher was prominent in affairs of the St. James Episcopal Guild until a few months ago. She and her husband were the oldest and longest-wed couple in the Golden Wedding Club.

In addition to her son and daughter, Mrs. Mosher is survived by several grandchildren and a number of great-grandchildren, all living in various parts of California.

Funeral services were Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at the Chapel of Palms, Centerville, with the Rev. W. J. Attwood officiating. Music and hymns were by members of the St. James choir. Interment was in the Odd Fellows' cemetery, at Irvington.

FALL FROM WINDOW KILLS RESIDENT OF HOME

Henry Barker, 57, Masonic Home resident, was instantly killed Saturday when he lost his balance and fell from a second story window.

According to attendants at the home, Barker stumbled against a low window sill and was catapulted to his death.

He came to the home from San Pedro, where he had been injured in a railroad accident several years ago.

Jack Vieux returned to Niles last week after a Los Angeles trip.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

By NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

LOVE STORY OF ANCIENT BABYLON

The writer has just finished reading one of the most fascinating of historical love novels—Belshazzar. It is not a new book, by any means, having been written by that brilliant weaver of historical romances, H. Rider Haggard.

The tale is laid in the ancient land of the Egyptians, and centered in the one-time capitol of Sais, and at Memphis, both long crumbled away in decay. Later, the most stirring parts of the book take the reader to Babylon during the time of its last king, just before Cyrus, the Persian, made it a vassal state.

When one reads the slushy, poorly-written stuff of the modern writer, he is lead to believe that in the realm of literature, art and music, the present day is painfully mediocre. Scientifically and materially we move rapidly now, but in the finer things of life we are sorrowfully deficient.

The book is a marvelously fascinating story, beautifully written, and while it is fiction it contains reliable historical facts that it is well for anyone to know. That Biblical narrative of the Babylonian king reading upon the wall, above the banquet table, that his days were numbered—that he had been weighed in the balance and found wanting—is dramatically told.

For those who like their stories woven about the dim and distant past, we recommend this book as a super production.

APRICOT GROWERS TO CHOOSE BEST OF 3 CONTROL PLANS

Growers Report Good Crop Prospects; Urge Advertising Drive

Three types of control plans for the California apricot growing industry will be studied as a result of a state-wide meeting of fifty prominent growers last week on the University of California campus at Berkeley.

The growers were undecided whether it was best to organize under the AAA, under the California pro-rate act, or under a strictly growers' plan. They asked their chairman, Andrew Davis, of Brentwood, and Alex Johnson, state Farm Bureau secretary, to appoint a committee of five to study the various plans. The result of the study will be reported to the central group soon. The plan selected will then be discussed in growers' mass meetings throughout the apricot growing sections.

Washington township growers are interesting themselves in the attempt to make the huge industry more profitable to the producers.

Speakers at the meeting last week suggested that the industry needs an advertising plan and uniform rating. Market prospects are good this year, both for canning apricots and the dried variety. A large crop is expected because of the good growing conditions and the short crop last year. In Washington township, one of the major producing regions of the state, growers report a heavy development of fruit buds. Barring premature blossoming and subsequent damage by late frosts, the crop in local orchards wil lbe substantially greater in tonnage than last year.

Harry Hunt, agricultural commissioner of Monterey county, visited Friday and Saturday with his mother, Mrs. H. R. Hunt, here. They spent Saturday in San Francisco.

Mrs. James R. Whipple was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ford, in San Francisco Friday.

TOYON BRANCH HAS MEETING MONDAY AT CAMPBELL

Ten members and two guests, of the Toyon Branch of the Children's Hospital, drove to Campbell Monday forenoon to meet at the new home of Mrs. J. E. Townsend there. The meet, which was also a luncheon, was in the nature of a housewarming for Mrs. Townsend who recently moved from Niles.

Business at the meeting consisted of a detailed financial report for 1934, given by Mrs. James R. Whipple, chairman of the branch. The report also gave a resume of the year's work. The treasurer's report will be read at the next meeting.

Members of the branch stated that the meeting was one of the most enjoyable of recent months, and commended Mrs. Townsend as hostess.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS ENJOY SOCIAL MONDAY

A business and social meeting of the Laura Loma Parlor of the Native Daughters was held in Niles Monday evening at the home of Mrs. R. H. Bennett on Second street. Following the business session, the group enjoyed cards.

Mrs. Ethel Fournier was awarded prize for highest score. Mrs. Katherine Plumb was consolation winner. Mrs. Ernest Nagli won a box of Kraft cheese offered as an additional prize.

At the close of the affair, the hostess served refreshments.

Auto Show Will Be Mecca For Dealers

Ed. Rose, local Chevrolet dealer and garage owner, will attend the auto show in San Francisco with members of his Niles and Centerville staffs. The show will be open from January 19 to 26, inclusive. Opening hours will be 12 o'clock noon daily.

Many other Wshington township dealers will view the new models at the show.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WHIST PARTY SLATED FOR TUESDAY EVENING

EFFICIENT NIGHT PATROL SERVICE GOAL OF JUNIORS

Initial Survey Points To Success In Try For Protection

Preliminary survey of the business district in Niles this week by Junior Chamber committeemen, points to a rapid improvement in the night patrol service in the town. The majority of the merchants and businessmen questioned stated their willingness to support the proposed system.

The younger businessmen, having taken up sponsorship of the night watchman service, are determined to give it a thorough overhauling. At a committee meeting Monday night, plans for purchase of a regulation watchman's clock and the necessary number of key stations were laid. The town was carefully mapped and zoned.

Reduction in burglary and fire insurance rates in the event that the system is adopted were investigated and found to be substantial, committeemen stated.

Need for a revived watchman service is emphasized by the recurrent robbery attempts here during past weeks. The situation of Niles, as a railroad center where itinerants gather, makes the patrol indispensible.

Junior Chamber members this week are looking forward to the Monday night meeting, when officers will be seated. Members of the Pleasanton Junior Chamber will officiate. Delegations from junior chambers throughout the bay district are expected to be on hand. The meet will be in the nature of a dinner gathering to be held at the Hotel Belvoir, beginning at 7 p. m.

ASSAULT SUSPECT DENIES GUILT HERE FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Manuel Fiao, Niles worker, pleaded not guilty to charges of attempted assault brought by Mrs. Ida Maria, mother of three children, when he was arraigned before Judge J. A. Silva at the Niles justice court Friday afternoon.

Time for the preliminary hearing in the case is set for January 25, at 1:30 p. m. Fiao is represented by Alberto Moura, Oakland attorney.

Fiao is alleged to have entered the Maria home recently, and to have made an attempt to criminally attack Mrs. Maria. Her screams brought two nearby workmen, who administered a severe beating to the alleged assailant.

Register Publisher To Attend Publishers Meet

Norman H. Parks, publisher of the Township Register, and Mrs. Parks, will leave for Santa Cruz Friday evening, where they will attend the annual convention of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association scheduled for Friday and Saturday. Newspaper men from all sections of the state will be on hand at the coast city.

Governor Merriam, a member of the craft, will be featured in an address Saturday evening.

Junior Chamber Assists In Ticket Sales For Affair This Week

Discussion of various subjects, including their forthcoming whist party, occupied the members of the Niles Chamber of Commerce at their Monday meeting. The civic group will give their affair on the evening of January 22, at Memorial building, Niles.

Early in the meeting a letter from the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce was read, offering the cooperation of the junior group in future civic undertakings, as well as in ticket sales for the coming whist. The applause of the senior chamber members left no doubt that the two civic groups would work in close harmony during the ensuing years. Dr. E. C. Grau, head of the chamber ticket sales committee, expressed his gratitude for the assistance of the younger men.

H. L. Scott, chairman of the prize committee stated that prizes would be gathered this week for display in the Jones and Ellsworth window.

Harvey Braun of the refreshments committee told that his department has completed its plans.

A letter from the Niles chapter of the Parent-Teachers' Association concerning the annual chamber luncheon at the grammar school was read and the civic group voted to select February 11 as the date.

H. L. Scott, Niles merchant, suggested that some ttownship-wide organization be worked out for protection against shop-lifters, active in this district of late.

A brief report of the First street hedge committee told that planting will begin as soon as weather permits.

DOG OWNER BRINGS SUIT FOR DEAD PET; REPORT

A complaint, alleging that he wantonly shot a police dog belonging to the Witherly boys of Mission San Jose, was filed recently against Mike Overacker, Mission rancher, by F. H. Witherly. Overacker was cited on a misdemeanor charge.

The dog-shooting is said to have taken place when the Witherly dog ran across the fenceline on the property owned by W. A. Starr, who had agreed with Overacker that stray animals should be kept off the range. Overacker is alleged to have fired on the Witherly dog from his own property, while the two Witherly boys shouted for him to desist. Overacker is said to have stated that he did not know the dog belonged to the boys.

Overacker's apparent determination to keep dogs off the range is said to be the result of his losing several turkeys, and having his cattle chased about by the canines.

Bicycle Belonging To Niles Boy Is Stolen

Thefts in Niles, becoming a common occurrance of late, continued Monday with the stealing of a bicycle belonging to Tom Estudillo. Estudillo, who works at the Niles theater, was in the habit of parking his two-wheeled vehicle behind the Marble service station. It was gone when he went for it Monday evening.

No trace of the machine had been discovered up to last night.

The Signal

WHITE-FACED and angry, they looked at each other over the front door threshold.

"The trouble with you, Don, is that you don't want me to have any pleasure at all." Mary Feldon's hazel eyes snapped fire, but the young man standing stolidly before her saw they were close to tears.

"Listen, Mary," he said quietly, "I want you to have everything it's possible for me to give. But you must remember I'm a railroader, and there's always a certain amount of danger to face. I can't be running around every night to parties and shows—losing sleep—and then go out on my runs. I'm not the road's president. I'm only a brakeman.

"Perhaps you made a mistake in marrying me, Mary," he said, his voice slightly bitter. "You were accustomed to better things. . . ."

"Don, I'm tired of all of this," Mary broke in. "I'm fed up with packing lunches, staying here alone nights when you're away on a two-day run."

"I'm sorry, Mary." A lump came into Donald Feldon's throat. "I didn't realize it had got you that bad." He turned and regarded his pretty wife searchingly. "But if that's how you feel, maybe we'd better call it quits. If you're not here when I come back tomorrow, I'll understand."

As long as she could see him, Mary watched his broad shoulders moving rhythmically under the blue denim jacket. She experienced, with her ebbing anger, a pang of remorse.

And it all had begun with a joking remark Don made about her house dress. "It makes you look so domestic, darling," he had said.

They had been out late at a party the night before, and she had just fallen asleep when the callboy came hammering at the door. Then, too, she had planned to attend Nellie Robbins' dance tonight.

She had slipped on an old house dress, cooked a hurried breakfast. But all the while anger brought on by disappointment and fatigue was tearing at her. Then Don had mentioned the dress.

"Domestic?" she had flared. "Slave, you mean! That's all I've been for the past two years!

"I suppose you won't like it, Don," she said to him, "but I'm going to the dance tonight regardless. I'll call up Bob Ames. He'll take me."

Bob Ames? Of course she had gone around with Bob before she had met Don. She never had cared much for him. She knew, however, that Bob Ames cared for her, and Don knew it, too. From anger and regret, Mary's emotions swung to the other extreme. A gnawing fear took hold of her. Divorce? She didn't want a divorce.

Don would realize she hadn't meant those things, and he'd signal his forgiveness. Several times in the past she had stood here on the porch regretting heated words, and then she had been comforted by Don's signal.

It had been a sort of game with them. The signal sometimes had been a wave of the hand; at other times, when Don was busy inside the caboose or watching signals from the far side of the engine, it was a handkerchief tied somewhere for her to see.

* * * * * * *

At the first sound of Don's train Mary was back on the porch. It was a fast freight. She gripped the porch rail with taut fingers, as the engine came abreast of the house. There were three men on the head end. Was that Don leaning against the farther side of the tender? It couldn't be! Don would be on this side, waving to her. It looked like Don, but—"

At noon Donald Feldon dropped down from the engine cab and waited for the caboose to come up. Standing there beside the tracks, he swore softly to himself for having been too stubborn to wave to Mary.

With weighted feet he swung aboard the forward steps of the lazy caboose when it came up. The shrewd old eyes of the gray-haired conductor, Lundy, surveyed him.

"I saw Mary on the porch as we came by," he said. "Did you wave from the front end?"

"Why—er—"

"Shut up," said the old man gently. "You didn't, or she wouldn't of been standin' there like that when the hack rolled past. You two had some sort o' fuss. I saw it on your face as soon's you hit the roundhouse. I'm an old busybody. I see everything."

Don sat down on a bunk while the conductor started for the rear platform muttering loudly: "Well, I guess the danged thing oughta be dry by now. It's been hangin' on the rail ever since we left the yards."

Don looked out to see him undo a large bandanna from the caboose rail and tuck it in a rear pocket.

He leaped up from the bunk. "Was that—on the rail—when the hind end passed the house?"

The conductor chuckled. "It was, son—unless it fell off and ran after the hack to tie itself back on."

A lump came up in Don's throat. "Busybody?" he managed to say. "You're a d—n' old angel, Lundy! That's what!"

Around the Farm

United States government scientists have found an effective cure for prussic acid poisoning of live stock.

It is estimated that from 1 to 2½ acres of Idaho farm land are required to raise feed for one horse for one year.

At average rate of consumption of corn cereals, one year's corn crop would produce enough cereal to last the people of the United States 470 years.

Ohio farmers now have about 42,000 more breeding ewes than they had last fall. But owing to a smaller number of lambs saved, the lamb crop is expected to be only 1 per cent larger.

Beethoven, Deaf, Composed

Beethoven composed music after he became deaf. A letter written in 1800, when he was not yet thirty, begs that his deafness be kept "a profound secret." He was completely deaf a few years later, but he continued to write music until November, 1826, five months before his death.

Large Stomach in Dogs

Dogs often eat as much if not more food than their masters because they have a much larger stomach capacity. The stomach of a 40-pound dog can hold at least three times as much as that of a 150-pound man.—Dr. C. M. Dibbell, Allentown, Pa., in Collier's Weekly.

Detective's Wife

By MARIE WEST

©. McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

UNDER the glare of the street light Sara saw the man's face as he passed her. The sight of it sent a paralyzing chill down her spine. For the last six months that face had been staring at her from the front pages of the Chicago newspapers. Foxy Fenton! Wanted for a string of bank robberies. Wanted for murder.

And for the last six months she'd been hearing that name over and over. Tim couldn't stop talking about him. That's what it meant being married to a detective.

Foxy Fenton! If only a policeman would appear! But that was hoping too much on a quiet street like this. And Tim wouldn't be coming home this way for another half-hour.

Instinctively she lengthened her stride. Perhaps it was being Tim's wife that made this feeling sweep through her, this urgent necessity to do something about it. She couldn't just let a criminal walk past her and disappear.

But, being a scant five feet of slim, inadequate strength she shuddered. What she had suddenly decided to do would take all the courage she could summon.

She had nearly caught up with the man.

Stumbling off the curb she fell against him. It could easily have been accidental; the man steadied her an instant, a speculative gleam in his eyes.

"Thanks!" She withdrew her arm slowly, managed an arch smile.

"We seem to be goin' the same way," the man said finally, his voice casual.

"Yeah. . . . I live a block down the street. . . ."

A classy dame, he noted. Didn't look the type—yet you never could tell.

He grinned down at her. "And you're lonesome," he said. "Sure, so'm I, sister."

They climbed the two flights of stairs.

"Well, here we are." She made her voice gay. "How about a highball?"

"Now you're talking, baby. Make mine strong. Need any help?"

"No, thanks. I'll be right back."

It was relief to escape from him for a few minutes; a chance to get a firmer grip on herself. It wouldn't be for long. Just until Tim came.

The man was sitting on the davenport when she returned. He took the glass she offered and patted the seat beside him. "Here's to you."

She sipped the plain ginger ale she had poured for herself. If she could just make him talk so he wouldn't touch her. She was afraid she might scream if he did that.

"How about some music," she suggested brightly going over to the radio.

"Get something peppy," he put in.

She took as long as she could. "How's this?" Rhythmic emerged from the loud speaker.

"Okay."

She saw that his glass was empty. "I'll get you another drink," she said.

Tim was late tonight. Tonight when she needed him so desperately!

She brought the drink into the living room. With one hand the man took it and with the other he drew her down beside him. She held her trembling lips together. Soon he would be trying to kiss her. Soon—

The key in the lock. At last! And big Tim standing there, his mouth agape.

"Oh Tim!" she cried.

The man jumped to his feet, his eyes narrow slits.

Tim stared at him. "As I breathe to live," he marveled, "I'd say you were Foxy Fenton, himself, if he hadn't been caught tonight."

"Caught?" Sara's voice was barely a whisper.

"Picked up in Nebraska. Late papers are full of it."

"Oh, I thought" she began weakly.

"You thought I was Fenton?" the man roared. "And you were setting a trap. Ain't that a laugh?"

He turned to Tim. "If you're the lady's husband, I'm sorry, pal. I didn't know she was married."

As the door closed upon him, Sara burst into hysterical tears.

"Tim," she gulped, "I saw him on the street. I wanted—"

"Sure, I know, Honey," he said gently. "You're a brave litle thing." A glint of humor came into his blue eyes. "But you leave the detecting to me, Honey. It's too dangerous for a pint-sized infant like you."

Next morning as Sara lit the flame under the coffee pot, she heard the familiar thud as the morning paper hit the back door. She ran out to get it. Spreading it open, she gasped at the headlines:

FOXY FENTON SUSPECT FREED

Her eyes scanned the column. The man in Nebraska wasn't Fenton after all. Just a suspicious character who looked like him. The police were working on the latest tip-off that Fenton was hiding in Chicago.

"Tim," she called.

"What is it, Honey?"

"Look!"

Over the page their eyes met with the same question.

Dollars and Stars

By ALICE D. KELLY

©. McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

THEY came upon the gypsy at the same time. Linda was riding early. Jerry was riding late, and they met at the cross roads. The gypsy was a little stupid looking and very dirty. She looked rather blankly from the pretty girl on the bay horse to the handsome man on the roan, and held out a blackened claw.

"Tell fortune?" she asked. "Lady first?"

Linda hesitated, her soft brown eyes alight.

"Shall I?" she asked impertinently. Jerry shrugged lean, broad shoulders.

"Rather foolish, isn't it?" he suggested. "A waste of time and money."

"Not at all," she answered crisply. "On a day like this anything might be true." She swung down off the horse and stood, little and slender and smart, near the gypsy. She held out a smooth hand.

"Tell me," she ordered. The gypsy looked more stupid than ever.

"Cross hands with silver," she said flatly.

"Oh, of course." Linda slipped two fingers in her pocket and flushed faintly. She looked up in some embarrassment at Jerry who seemed exceedingly bored. "I have no change," she faltered. "Could you lend me. . . . I'm so sorry . . . just a quarter will do."

Jerry dismounted politely. He fumbled through his coat pockets and handed her a fifty cent piece. As she thanked him, he lifted his cap and turned as it to mount again. Linda spoke impulsively.

"Oh, but aren't you going to have yours told? Come on, be a sport." He stared at her in some surprise. She really was very pretty. She caught the admiration in his glance and looked first surprised and then confused. "Well, will you?" she insisted. "I'll feel so silly all alone."

"Well, in that case—" He got out another coin and flipped it idly as the gypsy started.

"An' those man here, ne is man for you to marry; good mind, good body, big heart . . . all yours. It written in the stars."

Linda turned scarlet; Jerry coughed. "I think I'd better be going," he murmured. But the gypsy caught at his coatsleeve.

"Mus' stay," she said urgently. "Caravan moves on ver' soon."

"Still," Jerry insisted, with great delicacy. But—unexpectedly Linda laughed.

"Oh, stick around and hear about yourself," she begged him cordially, grinning like an urchin. Their glances crossed and something electric and warm and charming passed between them.

"Er—go on." Linda told the gypsy, quickly. "I'm in a hurry."

The gypsy droned on. "He loves you ver' much but he's proud; high temper. He want you so much. You marry pretty quick. That's what stars say." She didn't give Linda time to speak, but turned at once to Jerry.

"You mus' marry this girl. Never no happiness the stars bring you without red-haired girl. Your heart breaks if you don' take her. . . . Maybe she find another man. Maybe he beg her to marry heem. Better you hurry." Her tumbled broken words stopped abruptly as Jerry whirled away.

He glared ferociously at Linda. "So you're fooling around with the d—n golden-haired Leonard, are you? If you haven't got sense enough to know who you ought to belong to . . ."

"Yeah?" Linda stamped a well cut boot. "I belong to you—do I? Along with the rest of the harem. What about Emily and Catherine and Annie Burnett?" She sniffled and her voice quavered as she rubbed a sleeve roughly across her eyes.

Jerry took one stride across to her. "They can all," he said, into the glory of her hair, "go straight to h—l. Marry me, Lin? I want you so!"

Linda clung to him. "Well. . . ." She wrinkled her small nose comically, "If i"s written in the stars. . . . I never would have gotten the old divorce anyway if you hadn't been so indifferent about it."

"Indifferent!" Jerry's eyes flashed ominously. Then he drew a long breath and cuddled her. "Maybe it was partly my fault," he conceded generously, "anyway we'll find a justice of the peace; and this wedding will stick. Good old stars!"

He held his hands to assist her to mount, and the gypsy touched his arm timidly. "Kind gentleman, you promised me ten dollars if I told the lady what you said. Pretty lady, will you pay the five dollars you promised me? It is not my fault you came together, and the caravan moves on."

The two stared at each other. Incredulously, angrily. . . .

"Jerry, you dared!"

"Linda, of all the nerve!"

Gusts of laughter suddenly shook them. They fell into each others' arms. The gypsy looked anxiously from one to the other, and at length Jerry gave her two new bills.

"Stars or cash, which'll you have?" asked Linda solemnly.

Linda smiled, but suddenly tears glittering on her lashes.

"It was the stars," she said. "It was. We only paid to hear them."

SEEK TREASURE IN SOUTH SEA ISLANDS

Get Line on Peruvian Gold Buried in 1849.

Papeete, Tahiti.—Despite the fact that no authentic trace has yet been found of the fabulous treasure reported buried in the South Sea islands, plans have been completed for a search for the "king's ransom" which reputedly was taken from Peru in 1849 and subsequently hidden on the island of Penacri, Tuamotus, and the neighboring island of Hiti.

The background of the treasure hunt pieced together from various informants in the South seas is as follows:

Because of the political unrest in Peru in 1849 a number of extremely wealthy merchants and officials decided to convert their holdings into gold and remove the treasure to a place of safe-keeping, presumably Spain.

Crew Captures Ship.

The gold, in ingots, was supposedly placed on a schooner by five trustworthy representatives of the group, but the guards were allegedly thrown into the sea by the crew of the ship when they learned of the value of the cargo, and the course of the vessel changed to Australia.

After many days at sea, so the story goes, the ship arrived at Penacki, where part of the treasure was supposed to have been buried in the lagoon, and the remainder on the island of Hiti.

The schooner then cleared for Australia, landing at Port Darwin, where to avoid unpleasant inquiries the ship was destroyed by fire and the crew proceeded overland to Sydney. On this trip, it was said, several members of the crew were killed by aborigines.

Years later while a patient in a hospital in Australia a member of the crew of the schooner was said to have told a man named Howe the story of the treasure and to have turned over to him the location charts. Howe acquired financial backing and proceeded to French Oceania to investigate. His quest was unsuccessful and he was eventually deported after difficulties with French authorities.

Treasure Located.

Haunted by the lure of the treasure, Howe many years afterward interested another man who in turn interested a group of four other Englishmen, who began operating in French Oceania early this year. This group claims to have located the treasure by means of soundings, though it has not actually been seen or touched.

The expedition is now awaiting the arrival of diving apparatus. Two of the members of the expedition are in Papeete and the others are on various missions.

Value of the asserted buried treasure has been placed in some quarters at the staggering sum of $70,000,000 in gold ingots, plus a chest of jewels of unknown value.

Two representatives of the French government accompanied the expedition in its preliminary search this year. It is reported here that the French government is to receive 50 per cent of any treasure recovered.

Italy Plans New Drive in War on Tuberculosis

Rome.—Over 20,000,000 persons are insured against consumption in Italy, and 5,000 beds in special hospitals are set aside for the cure of such cases.

It is now announced that a new drive is to be put into effect this year and next, which will bring the number of hospital beds available for tuberculosis cases up to 20,000.

Fascist organizations here boast that nothing so ambitious has been attempted in any other country.

Fascism has engaged in a regular campaign to drive consumption out of the country, and the weapon chiefly relied on is the obligatory insurance system now in force for employees, workmen and servants of nearly all categories.

In fact, nearly 80 per cent of the cases offered state assistance in attacks from the disease were treated in special hospitals and sanatoria. When the disease has reached a certain stage of development removal of the patient becomes imperative according to the policy at present being followed by the Fascist doctors.

Congregational Church News

The pastor will present the first of a series of sermons Sunday morning on the subject of the Master's life after the baptism of John, dealing particularly with the days of the Temptation and their relationship to His ultimate resurrection. After many centuries the Man of Galilee is still the most fascinating, the most thrilling. It is well for us to reconsider some of the high-lights of His unique life.

The Sunday school board met at the parsonage last Tuesday evening. The most important business transacted was the electing of Mrs. Franklin as superintendent. Mrs. H. Duffie was appointed assistant, and Mrs. D. Clark recording and corresponding secretary. Our Sunday school is held every Sunday from ten to eleven. We are fully prepared to direct the early religious thinking of Sunday school children. Every interested parent in the community is urged to give his children the advantages of our organization.

Christian Endeavor will be at the usual hour of seven o'clock, followed by choir practice, led by Mrs. Gordon.

Bible Theater of the Air will present the story of the "Rich Fool," Sunday at 4 o'clock over KQW. This is one of our most dramatic plays. You cannot afford to miss it.

NEW SCOUT COUNCIL FORMATION IS COMPLETE

Representatives of all south county Boy Scout districts met in Hayward Friday night for the final discussion of the new southern division. Harvey Barun, Niles scout committee head, represented the Niles area.

It was decided at the meet, Braun said, to include Hayward, Washington township, Livermore, Pleasanton, Sunol and San Leandro in the new district. The latter, while closely associated with the Oakland area council was included to bring down the quota of the southernmost districts in the annual fund drive.

Foremost in the decisions concerning layout of the new district was that to dispense with the service of a paid field executive for the coming year. This will cut the quota about in half, Braun declared.

Inasmuch as the Oakland district will no longer receive funds from the newly formed council, there was considerable discussion of the present Oakland community chest set-up, which collects contributions from all county workers and officials. It is thought that county workers here and in the other southern sections should no longer contribute to the chest for the Oakland scouts, but should be asked for financial support only in the local drives.

AUXILIARY LISTENS TO COMMUNITY SERVICE TALK

Meeting Tuesday evening at the Memorial building in Niles, the Auxiliary Post No. 195 heard an address on community service delivered by Miss Cora Rackle, district community service chairman.

Miss Rackle, of Hayward, was acompanied by Mrs. E. Howard and Mrs. Lena Clapp, also of the same city. Refreshments were served at the close of the meet. Next regular meeting of the organization will be on the second Tuesday in February.

Last night a number of the local members traveled to Livermore to attend a district meeting at which State President Barrie Baadie was the main speaker.

Mrs. William Cull and Mrs. James Cull drove to Yountville Tuesday to visit the younger Mrs. Cull's father, J. E. Robbins, of Richmond, who is ill at the Veterans' hospital at Yountville.

C. J. Peterson, of Corning, was in Niles Sunday and Monday for treatment by Dr. N. C. Holden.

"DANCE MUSICALE" TO BE GIVEN BY CLUB ON JANUARY 25

Funds For Construction Of Club House Stage At Centerville

A stage for the club house at Centerville, to fill a need long felt by members of the Country Club, is seen this week with the announcement of a "Dance Musicale," to be held at the Veterans' Memorial building in Niles on the evening of January 25. Funds from the program and dance will be used in the construction of the stage.

Preceding the program, a number of hostesses will entertain at dinner at their homes throughout the district. The musicale will be followed by a reception and dance. The dinner groups will be made up in great part of out-of-town guests.

Among those who will be hosts at dinner that evening are: Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Dusterberry, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ellsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Pond, Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Holeman, Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Grau, Mrs. James R. Whipple, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Martenstein, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Bendel and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shinn. The Bendels and Shinns will etertain members of the younger groups for their respective daughters.

The program will feature the presentation of "Enoch Arden" with Wesley Dexter Gordon, dramatic reader, and Henri Salz at the piano. Other numbers will include interpretive dance numbers by Jewell Smith McKenna, of San Jose; baritone solo by Bruce Handley, of Stockton, and violin numbers by Morris Solen, of Sonoma.

Following the program, a six-piece orchestra will play for dancing.

Members stated that the affair is invitational, but that all those wishing to attend my receive admission cards from members of the club. Mrs. Roland Bendel is invitation committee chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Dusterberry will head the reception committee, to be made up of members of the board of directors of the Country Club, their husbands and a number of others.

Farmers' Union Will Discuss Pension Plan

Declaring that the plan is one of great interest today, officials of the Washington township local No. 180, of the National Farmers' Union, have planned to hold an open forum in the near future for discussion of the Townsend Old Age pension.

The time and place, as well as the speakers for the occasion, will be announced as soon as arrangements are completed.

THERE'S A RIGHT TYPE OF GAS HEATING EQUIPMENT FOR EVERY HOME!

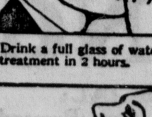
*Right in price.... in operating cost!

Have you a heating problem that is different? Then check down through these four examples of satisfactory installations of gas heating.

"Say, this is great . . . just feel that flow of lively heat." It's a floor furnace—the ideal solution for furnace heat in homes without a basement. Inexpensive to buy—for example, floor furnaces can be purchased for as little as . . . . $45 plus installation

"Here's the luxury of steam heat for modest homes with modest incomes." A gas steam radiator takes up but little space by a wall. Low in operating cost, and low in first cost. As little as $31.50 plus installation

"Cheerful fireside glow with warmth as clean as sunshine." One of the most companionable types of gas heating equipment. Very good to look at, and very, very modest in cost. Radiantfire as low as $16 plus installation



"Good looking and very satisfactory"—is what thousands say about the Circulating Heater. Can be used to heat from two to four rooms. Medium size for the average single floor home. As low as . . . . . $56 plus installation

College Editors Flay Hearst Campaign Against Liberalism

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—U.P.—A statement attacking the Hearst newspapers for "a crusade of reaction" and an attempt to start a "Red scare" was published simultaneously today in fourteen leading college newspapers in various parts of the country.

The fourteen editors, headed by James A. Wechsler of the Columbia Spectator, accused William Randolph Hearst of seeking to "stifle freedom of inquiry and expression and to impose upon American education the terror which terrorized education in Germany."

Although of widely divergent political beliefs, the statement said, "We are in accord in our opposition to Fascism. We interpret Hearst's onslaught as the vanguard of Fascism in America."

The satement, in part, follows:

"The Hearst press have been embarking upon a campaign which seriously threatens every vestige of independent thought and action in the schools. There is grave evidence that the hysteria is directed not against a single political element but against all progressive thought. It does not distinguish between faint pink and deep red. It classified liberals and radicals alike as public enemies to be investigated and imprisoned or deported. It is a deliberate, ruthless attempt to strifle freedom of inquiry and expression and to impose upon American education the terror which characterizes education in Germany.

Real Influence

"Mr. Hearst exerts real influence in America. His activities, however ludicrous and fantastic may they appear, reach an audience of millions throughout the country and can be instrumental in provoking the mass hysteria which set the stage for the introduction of Fascism in Germany. He can, in alliance with other '100 per cent American' organizations, so provoke and bewilder the great body of American people that independent research and dissenting opinions will be summarily banished.

"Mr. Hearst is a menace to the academic freedom which students and faculty have fought many bitter struggles to preserve. Now more than ever in a world fraught with disorder and insecurity, its preservation is most vital. Mr. Hearst declares that he is seeking to keep the mind of youth 'clean and wholesome.' We contend that he is advocating the acedemic goosestep."

Soares, who has hundreds of friends in this district, will be given a royal welcome.

Lions To Attend Mid-Winter Meet at Fresno

The Centerville Lions Club will be well represented at the Mid-Winter conference at Fresno tomorrow and Saturday, it was noted this week when Frank Madruga, Chick Santos, Joe Jason and Fred Rogers stated that they and their wives would make the trip.

Main Street To Get Another Cleaning

Main street, Centerville's, will be given another thorough cleaning in the near future, following decision of the Lions' board of directors to act on a suggestion by President Joe Jason Monday night.

The streets were last cleaned about six weeks ago, when the Lions and Centerville fire department cleaned gutters and culverts in preparation for the winter rains.

Caseys Urged to Hear Speaker on Jan. 30th

Thursday night, January 30, is the time chosen by the Centerville Knights of Columbus for their next big meeting.

Robert McKenzie, special agent and past state deputy will speak. His message will be one of importance, members declare, and all Knights are urged to be on hand.

LIONS CLUB PLAY TO BENEFIT BOY SCOUT UNITS

Much enthusiasm and no little curiosity is being built up over the forthcoming social stunt of the season, to be staged by the Centerville Lions Club, January 31 and February 1. The presentation, a farce comedy in three acts, is called "When Men Marry," and the cast will be made up of seventy Washington township men, transformed to fit the feminine roles by application of gowns and cosmetics.

Miss Esther Ludwig, director for the DeRoy Play Company, of Iowa, will arrive in Centerville soon to direct the seventy gawky males in their femine impersonations. The members of the cast will be chosen within a few days, Lions stated.

"When Men Marry" is being staged all over California, and seems to be a highlight among amateur theatricals of the season. Places where the production has been staged report that it is a tremendous hit.

It is expected that the play will be hailed as the funniest permormance ever presented in Washington township.

Proceeds derived from the production will be divided between the various Boy Scouts districts in the township to go toward making up their quota for 1935. Each town will receive a percentage of the proceeds, according to its individual scout quota.

DEATH TAKES WIFE OF CENTERVILLE RANCHER

Known throughout the Centerville district for the efficient way in which she ran her chicken ranch near here, Mrs. Kukiyo Nose, 61, passed away at her home early this week after a short illness.

She is survived by her husband, Tozo Nose, and several children. Mrs. Nose, a native of Japan, had been a resident of California for thirty-two years. Twelve years of that time were spent in Centerville.

Funeral was yesterday morning from Botelho's Chapel of Palms. Cremation followed at the Chapel of Chimes in Berkeley.

CHEVROLET FOR 1935 WILL SET NEW RECORD

At its great plant in Oakland, which supplies cars and trucks to the entire west, Chevrolet's assembly lines, the Fisher body plant, the new car conditioning unit, the great parts depot and all allied manufacturing units, are operating at top speed, producing hundreds of cars daily for the Chevrolet dealers throughout eleven western states.

Never in the history of Chevrolet's manufacturing experience here has the demand form dealers for cars been so intense. November and December sales of cars and trucks broke all records in the company's history with the exception of November, 1926.

Ed. Rose, Niles and Centerville dealer, points to the two new Chevrolet models with the declaration that "there is America's best selling automobile in 1935." Rose said the popularity of the cars has its basis in low price, plus proven economy, performance and durability.

New Fire Truck Due Here Next Tuesday

Added fire protection for Centerville, and a probable drop in insurance rates, will begin next Tuesday with the arrival of the new fire truck, according to Chief Fred Rogers.

The new apparatus will be added to the present equipment, Rogers said. In addition to the truck, 500 feet of new hose will arrive, to augment the supply already on hand.

BETSY ROSS PARLOR PREPARING FOR MEET FEB. 1

Further plans for their reception of the grand president on February 1, will be discussed by members of the Betsy Ross parlor, Native Daughters, when they gather for a special meeting and social time at the home of Miss Alice Semas. Practice for the coming event will take up a portion of the evening.

Among visitors at tonight's gathering will be Dora Brayton, supervising district deputy grand president of the Baya Vista parlor, and Mrs. Rose Fournier, deputy grand president.

On January 23, the group will hold another cottage whist, this one to be at the home of Mrs. Rose Piexotto, on Bain avenue. A similar whist, held last Friday evening at the home of Lucy Day was well attended.

On Tuesday night, January 22, members of the local parlor with Evelyn Garcia as presiding officer, will install officers for the El Cereso parlor of San Leandro at a huge joint ceremony with the Native Sons, to be held in the Memorial building at San Leandro.

HUSKERS VICTORIOUS IN FIRST LEAGUE CAGE CONTEST

Hailed as the best quintet in the unlimited division for many years at the Washington Union High school, the Husker varsity came through Friday night with a resounding win in their first league contest. Emeryville was the victim, to a tune of 32 to 27.

With the tally 17 to 15, at half time, the Huskers forged slowly ahead to clinch the contest in the second half. Dale Laybourne, star center, was high point man with sixteen markers. Laybourne's work is one of the reasons for a bright outlook for the rest of the year. Jack Rathbone was second with ten markers; Dundas rang up five and Dinsmore one.

The B team fared worse, losing their contest to the Emeryville lightweights 21 to 15. The Washington midgets were leading 7 to 6 at half time, but were unable to get under the hoop in the last two cantos. Masuda, center for the Huskers, was high point man for the team with eighth tallies. Amaral was second with six. Kitadi scored one.

The C team was defeated Tuesday afternoon in their last league game by Livermore. The final score was 30 to 17. Fudenna, Husker forward, did good shooting.

Standing of the C league at the close of the season: Livermore, Emeryville, Centerville and Pleasanton.

Games scheduled for next week: B and Varsity against Tamalpais at Centerville on Wednesday afternoon; B and Varsity against Livermore at Centerville Friday night.

Mammoth Whist Planned For Middle Of February

A mammoth whist, to be given by the Centerville Lions' Club for the benefit of the Washington Union High school baseball team will be held in Centerville sometime around the middle of February, according to Joe Jason, Lion president.

The whist was decided upon as an aid to the team when it was learned that the athletic budget would have to be curtailed this year because of additional expense incurred by repairs necessary to make the high school buildings earthquake-proof.

A. J. Rathbone is committeeman in charge of arrangements.

P.-T. A. MEET

Members of the Centerville Chapter, Parent-Teachers Association met Tuesday for their first session in 1935 at the Centerville Grammar school. The group plans an active year.

NATIVE SONS FETE 44TH BIRTHDAY TUESDAY

The forty-fourth anniversary celebration of the founding of the Washington Parlor, Native Sons, held Tuesday evening at Hansen's hall, Centerville, attracted a large attendance. Inasmuch as the meeting was the first in 1935, members stated that the new year is off to a good start for attendance.

A banquet, prepared by M. P. Mathiesen, was served at 10:00, following the business session. A twenty-eight-pound turkey was the main course. It is said that the bird was one of the largest ever to be raised in Washington township.

FORMER RESIDENT TAKEN BY DEATH AT TURLOCK

A resident of the Centerville district many years ago, Joseph Lewis, 68, died Tuesday morning at his Turlock home. He was widely acquainted here. He is survived by his wife and three sons.

A brother, M. H. Lewis, one-time Centerville contractor and now a resident of San Francisco, also survives. Frank Lewis and Mrs. M. Bettencourt, brother and sister of the deceased, live in Washington township.

A number of Centerville friends will attend the funeral at the valley city today.

VOLLEY BALL TEAM FORMED BY SONS HERE TUESDAY

A volley ball team, with members of the old Centerville Athletic Club team as a nucleus, will be formed soon by the Washington parlor, Native Sons. Practice will start next week.

The team will vie with other parlor teams throughout the east bay and possibly graduate into fast company later.

The formation of the team came as part of an activities program outlined at the Tuesday night meeting to stir interest of members in the organization.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Marriage licenses were issued last week to the following Washington township people:

'COLLEGE RHYTHM' HAS JOE PENNER AND LANNY ROSS

"The White Parade," a story of women who dedicate their lives to human service, with Loretta Young and John Boles, starts a three-day run at the Hayward theater tonight. On the same bill is "Lady by Choice" with Carol Lombard.

Ronald Colman in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back" and James Cagney in "The St. Louis Kid" are the features for Sunday and Monday January 20 and 21.

Beautiful Dolores Del Rio comes Tuesday and Wednesday in "Madame Du Barry," Jimmy Durante and Charles Butterworth add to the bill in "Student Tour."

At last, the picture you have been waiting for: "College Rythm" with Joe Penner, Lanny Ross, Jack Oakie and Lyda Roberti. It plays three days, beginning Thursday. On the same bill is Guy Kibbee in the great comedy, "Babbitt."

Proper selection of type, careful composition, and painstaking press work are the foundations of good printing. The Register is justly noted for all three. Let us estimate your next job. Call Niles 23.

Final Adjustment Soon In Sloan-Hirsch Case; Huey P. Long Interested

Final adjustment of the Sloan-Hirsch foreclosure case is in sight, it is reported, following the filing of a petition by Mrs. Elizabeth Sloan under the Frazier-Lemke amendment to the National Bankruptcy act.

The case is now in the hands of the referee in bankruptcy, and first hearing will be in Oakland on Wednesday, January 23, at 2 p. m., in the office of the referee in the Tribune tower.

The wide interest shown in the Sloan-Hirsch case is due to the fact that it is the first case in this district of the federal court in which the constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke act was questioned.

The case arose through the attempted foreclosure on the Sloan ranch by Ed. H. Hirsch, of Irvington.

Following is a letter received by Mrs. Sloan from United States Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, who was instrumental in the adoption of the Frazier-Lamke bill by congress.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 3, 1935

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Sloan,
Broadview Hill,
Irvington, California.

My Dear Mrs. Sloan:

I am quite sure if you could see the bags of mail I receive every day you would appreciate how impossible it is for me to even read it all, much less answer with personal letters. The past six days I received over fifteen thousand letters.

In an endeavor to reply to each person writing me, before I return to Washington, I find it necessary to reply briefly in this manner. Please forgive me for not writing you a personal letter, which you are really entitled to, since yours was brought to my personal attention.

You need have no fear of being able to save your farm through taking advantage of the Frazier-Lemke Bill, which I was instrumental in having Congress adopt. It has been declared constitutional by hundreds of federal judges and it is now in effect in all sections of the country.

Assuring you of my desire to always be of service whenever it is within my power, I am, with best wishes

Very Sincerely,
(Signed) HUEY P. LONG,
United States Senator.

FIRE TOWER TO BE BUILT BY DECOTO DEPARTMENT

Drill in the proper use of ladders in fire fighting will be one of the major activities of the Decoto fire department this spring, according to Chief Roland Bendel.

A thirty-foot fire tower, topped with the siren, wil be enclosed with opening lift for drill windows, and platforms put up for training the men in high places.

The interior of the proposed tower will be used for storage purposes and for hose drying racks. When finished, the tower will be the only one of its kind in the township.

Unsanitary Condition Of Streets Discussed

South county towns, whose streets have been unswept since the transfer of county roads to the state system, may be cleaned up yet, it was revealed Tuesday, when suggestion was made by a number of citizens that perhaps the state board of health, or local sanitary districts could be called upon to effect a clean-up.

The suggestion was evoked by the unsanitary condition of some of the streets, where debris, soaked by the winter rains, was becoming a trifle odoriferous.

All efforts by township civic groups to have the state clean the streets have been fruitless, highway authorities maintaining that no funds were available for the purpose.

Did You Ever Stop to Think

THIS INDEFINABLE SOMETHING

¶"here is no substitute for newspaper advertising. The radio advertisement undoubtedly produces some results. Newspaper publishers should not approach the discussion of the subject in any spirit of venom. If radio advertising is effective, if it produces results, it will endure. That is the real test of any service.

¶"But the fact remains that the radio ad cannot do the job alone. With few exceptions the advertiser who uses the radio uses it only supplementally and depends on the newspapers and periodicals to carry his real message. The radio advertisement carries to the listener a certain spirit of resentment, similar to the spirit which the patron of the moving picture feels toward the screen advertisements. The average radio listener-in knows, of course, that radio programs cannot be maintained and furnished him without advertising talk when he is listening to a favorite program.

¶"The fact that many newspapers have engaged in the broadcasting business themselves does not alter the situation as regards the desirability of newspaper advertising over other forms. It would be idle to say that newspaper advertising is the only advertising which brings results for, of course, did other forms of advertising not produce results those who spend their money for them would not continue to do so. But it remains a fact that the newspaper is the preferred advertising medium and gives the advertiser more for his money than any other form of publicity. This is not an idle statement nor a wild guess, but it is a fact proven by careful surveys and check-ups made over a long period. There is something about the influence of a newspaper going into a home which carries a prestige which no other form of advertising can possibly carry, the benefit of which the advertiser enjoys. This indefinable 'something' which goes with the newspaper is something that money cannot buy. The newspaper is an institution, an entity. It grows in the affections of its readers; it is eagerly looked for and read by all members of the family. The newspaper goes into the home because the reader invites it there.

¶THE NEWSPAPER WILL CONTINUE TO BE THE CHOICE MEDIUM OF ADVERTISERS BECAUSE IT IS ONE OF ALL OTHERS WHICH HAS PROVED ITSELF TO BE SUPERIOR."

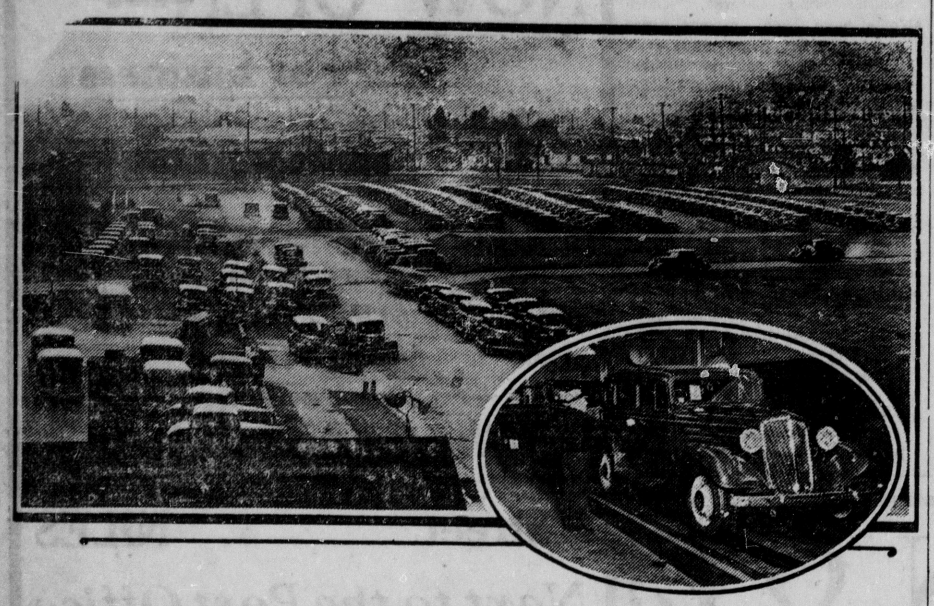
CHEVROLETS TAKE EYE OFMOTORISTS



Mother Knows Best

By PAUL M. VEST
©, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

THE two of them attracted considerable attention as they entered. Regular nightly visitors at the Silver Slipper had learned who they were.

"Oh, look!" a girl in a green hat nudged her escort. "That's them society swells. Her mother's the De Peyster society dame."

The millionaire rubber man's son overheard the comment and frowned.

"Good heavens, Grace!" he muttered. "Must we come to this awful place every night? Whatever do you find of interest here?"

The girl fingered the menu and looked idly about. "Oh, I don't know, Von — there's something about it I like. Perhaps it's the music." Her wide blue eyes were upon the slim back of the orchestra leader.

"Humph!" was the response. "I never knew you to take such an interest in second-rate music before."

They danced a few times, but Von was utterly bored. "I've had about all I can stand," he complained irritably. "Come, can't we go somewhere else?"

"In a little while, darling," she consoled him. Over his shoulder her eyes met the dark, flashing ones of the orchestra leader. A smile touched the violinist's lips—in a moment the orchestra commenced playing the "Rendezvous Waltz."

As the number ended, Grace excused herself. "Just a moment, darling, until I dab on a bit of powder, and we'll gallop along."

Von couldn't carry a tune and scarcely knew one song from another. Consequently he was not aware that every night, immediately following the "Rendezvous Waltz," his fiancee found it necessary to "dab on a bit of powder." But then Von wasn't a very observing young man. Had he been he would have noticed that the handsome orchestra leader invariably disappeared following the same number.

* * *

In a little alcove back of the orchestra platform, they met: "Oh, Tony . . ." she cried.

He held out his hands to her. In a moment she was in his arms. "Dearest, this can't go on," he whispered. "Break your engagement. Explain things to your mother. Let's have our love out in the open."

She clung to him. "You don't know mother. She—but I promise I'll tell her tonight. And this time I'll not give in to her. . . ."

He kissed her tenderly. "Don't be afraid, darling. What does anything matter so long as we have each other?"

* * *

Tears glistened in Grace's eyes. "But, mother," she remonstrated. "You don't understand. You don't understand—I love Tony. We're going to be married. . . ."

Mrs. DePeyster raised her patrician head and regarded her daughter in amazed horror. "Grace . . . Grace! Have you entirely lost your mind!" she gasped. "Marry a common entertainer in a cheap cafe. It's grotesque!"

"But mother, what difference does it make what he does if we love each other. . . ."

Mrs. DePeyster drew herself up regally, her dark, imperious eyes blazing. "You are engaged to Von and you will marry him. Enough of this nonsense. Mother knows best!"

The wedding was a brilliant social event. Following the ceremony Grace and Von sailed for Cherbourg on a wedding trip.

Back home again a month later, Grace, for some obscure reason, insisted upon visiting the Silver Slipper once more "just for old time sake," she said.

Von groaned. "Oh, that terrible place! I'll humor you this once but this is the last time."

At their table, Grace glanced disinterestedly at the orchestra leader. How stupid of her ever to have imagined herself in love with such a person.

At first she didn't notice that the orchestra was playing the "Rendezvous Waltz." When she did, she caught her breath sharply. Was that fiddler fool enough to imagine that she was still infatuated with him?

Indifferently, she glanced about the room. Suddenly she gasped and sat up very straight, her eyes on a table tucked away in one corner. The lone woman there was sipping a cocktail and gazing in evident fascination at the dapper, patent-leather haired orchestra leader. It was her mother!

Grace couldn't tear her horrified eyes away. The number ended and she watched her mother leave the room; the orchestra leader suddenly disappeared.

* * *

It was scandalous! It was shocking! It was one of those Sunday supplement things—"Society Leader Marries Cafe Entertainer." The four hundred were aghast.

"Good Lord!" Von gasped at the breakfast table as he scanned the lurid headlines in the paper. "A common fiddler—how could she!"

Grace's eyes were noncommittally on her grapefruit. "I . . . I guess mother knows best, Von. . . ."

Aunt Emma

By CHET GRANT
©, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

"LISTEN, ma, when is she goin' home, huh, ma?"

Georgie Blake turned his attention from driving the Iron Horse to catch his mother's eye, but Mrs. Blake was examining the contents of her shopping bag.

"When is who going home? Georgie?"

"'When is who going home!'" Georgie repeated with disgust. "You know who I mean, all right. Aunt Emma: the pest!"

"Now, Georgie, remember she is your father's sister," Mrs. Blake remarked automatically; she had been saying it for weeks. Then she gave a relieved sigh. "Ah, here it is. I was afraid I'd forgotten Aunt Emma's reducing salts."

"I wish she'd take an overdose of those things and reduce herself back to California," Georgie snapped back savagely.

"Don't be silly," his mother advised. "She means all right. It's just that she loves you so much she . . ."

"Listen," Georgie hissed. "Listen, ma, how would you like it if your private life was spread out for public gaze the way mine is every day?"

"You must remember . . ."

"That she's my father's sister!" Georgie groaned, reaching for the shopping bag. "I guess you're kind of fed-up, aren't you, ma?"

"We'll say no more about it," his mother remarked severely.

A little more than a month ago Aunt Emma had came from California for a short surprise visit with her brother.

She had just turned forty and was working might and main to reverse the process.

"Yoo-hoo, I'm upstairs." Aunt Emma's soprano heaved against the walls. "Georgie, deah! Guess who's coming tonight."

"Eddie Cantor," George growled.

"You funny boy!" Aunt Emma twittered. "Of course not. It's the Elston's Young People's society."

"What!" Georgie was in the hall with one wild leap. "What are they comin' up here for?" Alas for all his careful plans to keep plenty of distance between Aunt Emma and the gang's eager ears!

"I knew you'd be delighted, Georgie. Your friend, Mabel Porter, phoned while you were out, so I invited them all to come up to a party."

"Aw, Aunt Emma, I—"

"We'll have the duckiest time, Georgie. Ice cream, cake . . ."

"Nuts!" Georgie mooched into the living room.

"Yes, and nuts," Aunt Emma cooed after him.

The society arrived in a body for Aunt Emma's fame had spread. Suddenly a bright light shone through the red indignation that surrounded Georgie. The smile he bore as he entered the living room a few minutes later would have ruined a pound of butter.

"Here's my baby now!" Aunt Emma clucked. Georgie caught his father's sympathetic wink as the society snickered. "The meeting," Georgie intoned, "will now come to order."

"Listen to the great big man," Aunt Emma cooed. "And I knew him when he couldn't say anything but 'Goo-goo and ga-ga!'"

"Haw, haw, haw!" That was Skinny Tate, Georgie made mental note. "Say, I'll bet he was all mouth," somebody remarked. "I'll bet he didn't win any baby shows."

"He did, too!" Aunt Emma defended. "Look at this picture taken the day he won first prize at the County fair baby show." The society went into several huddles.

If his friends expected a wrathy outburst from Georgie or a show of discomfort, they were disappointed. He became preoccupied with a package taken from one of his pockets. "Say," Tooties Walsh demanded suddenly, "what're you carryin' that puncture kit in here for?" Georgie grinned as the others turned their attention to this new interest. "Oh," he remarked with a fine nonchalance, "I carry this on account of Aunt Emma's rubber corset. She might get a blowout."

Mrs. Blake and Aunt Emma gasped. Georgie drew the rubber chin strap out of his pocket. "Aunt Emma—" he began when the room was suddenly plunged into darkness. His father's voice cut through the murk. "You'd better come down cellar and help me fix that fuse, Georgie."

The enormity of his deed settled upon Georgie as he crept down the cellar steps. "I ought to belt you," Mr. Blake growled in the darkness. "I . . . Oh, for Pete's sake, kid, holler for your aunt's appreciation. I . . . I have to sit down."

Georgie heard his father chuckling and with a relieved grin he fumbled for the fuse box. The light flashed on before he reached it and his mother came down the stairs.

"I turned out the lights," she snapped. "Shame, Georgie Blake. . . . I've apologized. I've done everything I can."

"Is she going home?" Georgie and his father asked simultaneously.

"She is not," Mrs. Blake wailed. "She's staying another month just to show us she hasn't any hard feeling."

Camp Fire Mothers Club Is Disbanded

In order that guardians of the separate groups might have more leeway in selecting their own sponsors, and in working out plans for their girls, the Camp Fire Mothers' Club was formally disbanded Tuesday night. Mrs. J. L. Townsend, former guardian, recently moved to Campbell.

Mrs. Charles Shinn will be senior guardian; Mrs. C. E. Anderson, of Centerville, will direct the Centerville Bluebirds; Mrs. Nell Farington Myers will direct the Gemewuance group and Mrs. Clark Griffin will have charge of the Niles Firefly division.

SCIENCE CHANGING "GIRL-BOY" TO MAN

Dwarf Child Will Never Be Physically Fit.

Kittanning, Pa.—There is a long, uphill struggle ahead of Clara—now renamed Clarence—Schreckengost, the twenty-year-old dwarf whom surgeons are changing into a normal man.

The new science of the ductless gland treatments is being used with success, it was learned, and the physicians are confident that the "girl-man" will win the fight.

A physician familiar with the case said:

"Clarence will never be completely normal. We believe, however, that gradually 'he' will improve physically. We have not changed his sex—such a thing is impossible. All we have done is to encourage the development of the patient's real sex."

The child is only 51 inches tall and unable to read or write, and has six normal brothers and sisters.

Cases Not Rare.

Changes from one sex to another, as in the case of Clara Schreckengost, are far from being rare, although seldom heard about outside of medical circles.

Modern medical science has discovered that the change from one sex to another is the result of strange variations in the embryo or in imbalance in the ductless glands.

In such glands hormones are produced. They are responsible for the secondary sex characteristics, the masculine voice and beard of men, for instance.

If something goes wrong among the endocrines, a girl may grow more like a boy, and vice versa. This accounts for bearded women of the side shows and other like freaks.

For twenty years Mrs. Lettie Schrenckengost has guarded her secret, even from her husband, Clark Schreckengost, a silent moody man of this Pennsylvania backwoods farming country.

"Better Off Dead."

And neither did Mrs. Schreckengost say anything when their family physician, kindly Dr. George S. Morrow, now dead, laid in her arms the malformed little creature who was to be named Claire.

The ancient Greeks had a word for it, and a myth, to explain these thwarted children of Hermes and Aphrodite in whom the sexes were fused in a mystic union.

But to the country practitioner of two decades ago, the Schreckengost offspring was a biological quirk and better off dead, according to the mother.

"He said that it would be more kindly to put it aside and let it die," Mrs. Schreckengost said.

"The doctor told me," she said, "that it might be either a girl or a boy, and asked me how I would dress it. I said I would dress it like a girl.

"He said I ought to call it by some name that would fit either a girl or a boy, like Francis, or Frances. So I said I would name it Claire and if it developed like a boy, I would leave off the E."

And though it was no secret in the rural neighborhood that Claire was somewhat different, a girl she remained, in habits and dress, until the first of a series of remarkable operations in the West Penn hospital at Pittsburgh this summer disclosed the fact that the E could, with propriety, be deleted from her name; that Claire was of masculine persuasion.

Lost People of Guinea Plateau to Stay Nude

London.—The newly discovered race on the New Guinea plateau is to remain nudist.

That is as far as the missionaries are concerned, for an expedition bearing civilization to a newly discovered race of people living in complete isolation from the rest of the world on a plateau in New Guinea, is excluding clothes from among its gifts.

Rev. V. H. Sherwin of Gosport, who has left home to take religious and medical comforts to the 200,000 inhabitants of the new territory, expressed himself strongly on the point.

"One of our policies is to fight against clothing natives. The big mistake western civilization has made is to put natives into clothes.

"These people ordinarily have a high standard of morality, walking about often naked, and are not possessed by the sexual exaggerations that we have in civilization.

"Moreover, in humid heat the more the body is exposed the better from the medical point of view."

Colonels of Kentucky Use a Lot of Ribbon

Frankfort, Ky.—There's not much red tape about getting a commission as a Kentucky colonel—but plenty of ribbon.

State records show that more than half a mile of blue ribbon has been used on honorary commissions since December 2, 1931, when Gov. Ruby Laffoon took office.

The state has 2,764 commission certificates, each with a foot of ribbon.

Superior Guy

By ARCHEY C. NEW
©, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

GUSSIE'S eyes roved over the dining room, appraising her fellow diners discontentedly. She hardly heard the harangue of her dinner partner.

"I'm getting fed up, see?" he snarled at her. "Y' can't even pick 'em any more."

"No?" she sneered, listlessly.

"No!" he sneered back. "Look at th' last twice. A shoe salesman without a dime, and then that tough cattle man who sez 'Go ahead and shoot.'"

"Can you beat that?" she exclaimed, nudging him excitedly. His gaze followed hers to a clean-cut young man, with a calm, detached air, then entering the room. The new arrival coolly ignored the hat-check girl's arresting greeting, and left the waiter captain standing open-mouthed, as he deliberately wended his way among the tables and sat down at one near the orchestra.

Gussie laughed aloud. "That's a bird I'd love to get. Class, all over! Used to good things; servants don't scare him any."

"Aw, catfish!" jeered Joe. "Cut th' moonin', and get down t' bizness. Yeh couldn't even intrust a swell like him with a fan dance."

"Stick around, Joe," she advised, "we're going badger huntin' tonight."

Timing her exit with the stranger's, she followed him later into the lobby. Pausing before the locked door of the public stenographer's office, he glanced irritably at a small card on the door. "Back at 8:30. Leave name and room number on this pad." In a flash, Gussie was at his side, and with a possessive grip on the door-knob, turned to face him brightly.

"Had to come back for something," she lied, glibly. "Did you want me?"

Ah, the stenographer! He stared at her fixedly. "Are you permitted to come to guests' rooms? I have some letters. . . ."

"Oh, yes," she assured him, with a quick nod. A brilliant thought flashed on her, and she reached for the pad. "Leave your name and room number. I—I have to check it."

"Oh, boy!" she gloated to Joe a minute later, gleefully exhibiting a stenographer's pad and pencil. "Now, we're all set. Gimme twenty minutes' start!"

"Are you nuts?" hissed Joe. "You're no—"

The door to 808 was ajar, but Gussie rapped, demurely. The guest, John Burns, crossing the room with some collars, saw her in the doorway.

"Come in!" he invited, politely. "You are very prompt."

He waved her to a low easy chair. "Sit down here. You'll find it very comfortable." Leisurely, he drew up a larger armchair, between her and the door, facing her. Taking a sheaf of papers from his pocket, he said, matter-of-factly, "Take a letter!"

He paid little attention to her as he droned ahead. Better so. The meaningless curlicues on her pad might have given him quite a shock. As he finished, and turned his attention to a file at his elbow, Gussie rose, stretched herself sensuously, and with pad in hand, perched on the arm of his chair. He glanced up with some surprise as one slender, silk-clad leg dangled uncomfortably close to him, and with elaborate carelessness, her arm stole around the back of his chair.

"So-o?" came a snarling voice at his back, "that's the way you double-cross me, hey?" Joe, with gun leveled, entered the room, closing the door carefully behind him. "Well, you big mutt, talk up. Whatcha doin' in here, with my wife?"

Burns was fumbling with his file, and Gussie, leaning closer, threw both arms around him convulsively, meanwhile eyeing the newcomer with convincing terror. Quite slowly and deliberately, and showing pained surprise, he disentangled himself from her embrance, wriggled out of his chair, and his gaze met that of the "outraged husband."

"What are you doing in here?" he demanded, ominously. "Get out!"

"Well, I'll be d—d!" screeched Joe, hysterically, and flourishing his gun threateningly. "It's gonna cost you plenty, see? And I ain't goin' until—"

Burns, with one rapid leap, brought his open hand to the rat's face with a resounding slap, sending him reeling. Following up the slap, he grabbed the gun, thrust it into his own pocket, and, then, grasping Joe firmly by the scruff of his neck, dragged him to the door, and hurled him into the hall.

"Sorry you had to witness that," he told her, apologetically. "But I certainly owe you a debt of gratitude." She stared at him. "Sure was game of you, throwing your arms around me to protect me from that hold-up man. But, then, I wasn't afraid of him."

"And—and you're not sore at me?" gasped Gussie.

"How much do I owe you?" he asked seemingly ignoring her question good-naturedly. "Here," he fumbled with her writing pad, "write it down here. You see," he smiled wistfully, "I'm totally deaf."

IN THE POULTRY YARD

Pullets that start laying before they are housed nearly always stop when they are moved.

* * *

Poultry give off a greater relative quantity of moisture than almost any other animal.

* * *

Eggs with a deep yellow yolk generally have more food value than those with a pale yolk.

* * *

It is best for the beginner not to cull too heavily, and not discard a hen on one point, but rather on a combination of points.

* * *

It is a mistake to keep growing stock of different ages in the same yard or pen, as the older birds will harass the younger ones.

* * *

Yellow corn is much more valuable for scratch feed than white corn. It contains vitamin A which is so necessary for poultry growth.

Seehuver Released On Insufficient Evidence

Charges against A. L. Seehuver, arrested recently in Niles on a charge of drunken driving, were dismissed on motion of District Atorney Earl Wrren last week, when it was concluded that the evidence of guilt was insufficient to get a conviction.

Seehuver was arrested on a Niles sidestreet just as he started up his car. He was seen by no one who could testify as to his piloting the vehicle on a public road, which testimony is necessary to make a charge effective, acording to the interpretation of Warren.

The arrest was made by Constable O. W. Ebright.

NILES TOSSERS TO PLAY OAKLAND 9 HERE SUNDAY

Niles Chamber of Commerce baseball team, under the management of Clarence Pine, will play the Remar Bread nine at the Niles diamond Sunday afternoon, according to Pine.

A game with a San Jose team, scheduled for Sunday, will be postponed. Of interest in the local nine's schedule is a game with Joe Blacow's San Jose State College team on January 26. Blacow, manager of a number of teams in this district, has been coach at San Jose for several weeks. This is his first task as coach of a college nine. Bert Watson and Francis Pura, both local products, with experience from the Niles C of C nine, are playing on Blacow's team.

NEW PLUMBING ESTABLISHMENT OPENS IN NILES

A new plumbing service to residents of the Niles district was begun this week with the opening of the E. H. Frick Plumbing Company shop on J street, next to the post office.

E. H. Frick, proprietor, states that he will offer prompt and efficient plumbing work, in addition to sheet metal work of all kinds.

The new establishment will carry first class heating equipment and fixtures. Frick also runs a plumbing shop in Newark.

Army Recruiting Officer Here Jan. 25

Thomas D. Vernon, staff sergeant, in charge of recruiting for the United States army, states this week that he will be at the Niles post office from 8 a. m. to 12 noon on Friday, January 25, for the purpose of interviewing all who may be interested in enlistments in the service.

Vernon has authority to accept a limited number of men between the ages of 18 and 35, who are: single, without dependents and of good character. Those under 21 years of age must furnish written consent of their parents.

The vacancies are for service in the Hawaiian Islands.

THIEVES SHATTER GLASS IN THEFT ATTEMPT

Not counting on such a loud crash when they smashed a pane of glass in the front door of the Murphy and Briscoe store early Sunday morning, burglars evidently frightened themselves away from the scene before Arthur Roderick, night watchman, could arrive to arrest them. Roderick heard the din when the would-be thieves tossed a large rock through the glass.

Ben Murphy, store proprietor, stated that the work was that of burglars, in his opinion, and not a piece of hoodlumism, as had been suggested.

Three other business houses on First street have been burglarized during the past two weeks. Authorities believe that the thefts are the work of local gang.

Huey Long To Speak Over Air Saturday

Local radio listeners have been remarking during the past week on the talk broadcast recently over the national hookup by Huey Long, United States senator from Louisiana.

Long will be heard again Saturdy night, January 18. Those who care to hear him are urged to consult the radio progrms for that day, to discover the exact time of his address.

Nell Myers to Broadcast In Honor of President

The circle of radio fans who tune in on San Jose station KQW, to listen to Nell Farrington Myers, featured on the Friendly Hour program, will be greatly widened with the increase in power of the unit to 1000 watts. The entire western United States will be the broadcasting field for the new equipment.

Tomorrow afternoon, Mrs. Myers will be heard again, starting at 1:00 p. m. Her program this time will be dedicated in part to readings of her original work in honor of the birthday of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The KQW management allotted a half hour to Mrs. Myers last time. She will be heard three times during the Friendly Hour tomorrow.

HIGHWAY PATROL TO CRACK DOWN ON SPEED FIENDS

Motor vehicle drivers were reminded today by the California Highway patrol that it is unlawful to pass a vehicle on its right side anywhere except on a city street where there are two or more lanes of traffic going in each direction. Passing on the right on a state or county highway outside of the incorporated areas is strictly forbidden.

An increase in motor accident deaths was noted during 1934, the patrol headquarters said, drunken driving and excessive speed being the two greatest contributing factors. The addition of a considerable number of men to the existing patrol will abate the menace, officials declared.

The apprehension of drunken drivers and speeders will constitute the major work of the patrol in 1935.

Cows Discontented With Pasture, Move

Although the quality of their milk did not sem to be effected by their discontent, about twenty-five cows belonging to an Irvington dairy struc't last week, and staged a walk-out. Trampling the fence of their new pasture, the bovines were hotfooting for their former pasture, more than two miles away, when they were almost run down by Howard Poe, Mt. View motorist.

Poe called Constable Tom Silva, who saved the day by herding the bossies into a nearby field, where he kept them until dairy hands arrived to take charge.

Whether working conditions for the cows will be improved is a matter for mediation, the dairyman declared.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hunt are spending the week with Hunt's mother, Mrs. H. R. Hunt.
